This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

THE REFORM CLUB AND ITS LIBRARY.

THE REFORM CLUB was founded in the spring of 1836 for the purpose of promoting social intercourse among the Reformers of the United Kingdom. Five years earlier, the Tory party had founded the Carlton Club for the purpose of resisting the Reform Bill. Each of these Clubs has continued to be the leading one of the Liberal and Tory parties respectively. Two other Liberal Clubs were in existence when the Reform was founded. The one was Brooks's, which was the headquarters of the Whig party; the other was the Westminster Reform, which was composed exclusively of Radicals. Many Liberals could not profit by either. There was no room for them at Brooks's, while they were repelled from the Westminster Reform by its intensely Radical atmosphere. A request was made to enlarge Brooks's, so as to accommodate 600 additional members; and it was after a refusal to comply with it, that the Right Hon. Edward Ellice, M.P., called a meeting at his house to consider what should be done: the founding of the Reform was the result. Nineteen-twentieths of the members of the Westminster Reform joined the new Club; and soon afterwards the Westminster Reform Club was dissolved.

As the precursor, though not the progenitor of the Reform, the Westminster Club deserves a notice. It was established on the 7th of March, 1834: the first members who then agreed to form the first Committee being Mr. John Wilks, Mr. Alderman Wood, Mr. Rigby Wason, Mr. Morgan O'Connell, Mr. Daniel Whittle

Harvey, Mr. Tennyson, Mr. Kennedy, Captain Fitzgerald, Mr. John O'Connell, and Mr. Wallace. Amongst the earlier elected members were Daniel O'Connell, Mr. Feargus O'Connor, Captain Gronow, Colonel Perronet Thompson, and Henry Lytton Bulwer. Its members were accommodated in the house of Mr. Alderman Wood, at 24, Great George Street, Westminster. On the 2nd of July, nearly three months after its establishment, Benjamin Disraeli was a candidate for admission. He was proposed by Mr. Bulwer, seconded by Dr. Elmore, and elected by the Committee. In March, 1835, he ceased to be a member, having then requested, in a letter to the Secretary, "that his name be erased from the list of members of the Club, as he is prevented by engagements from availing himself of its conveniences." Disraeli enclosed a cheque for fifteen guineas due by him to the Club. The Committee resolved "that the cheque sent by Mr. Disraeli be returned to him, and that he be informed that the Committee decline its acceptance, having no inclination to accept money from gentlemen whose engagements render them unable to avail themselves of the conveniences of the Club." A fortnight after Disraeli's resignation, Joseph Hume was elected a member. Till that time the Club was known as the Westminster. Hume was anxious to change its name to the Reform. A Sub-Committee was appointed to consider the matter, the result of their deliberations being a compromise in accordance with which the Club was named the Westminster Reform. The numbers of the Club never exceeded 200. When it became apparent that the exclusive Radicalism of the Club alienated, instead of attracting candidates, its members lost heart, and readily joined the Reform, in which all varieties amongst the reformers of the United Kingdom were to find a home—the old Whig, the moderate Liberal, and the extreme Radical there uniting under one roof for social intercourse. The crest of the new Club was composed of the rose, thistle, and shamrock in harmonious combination.

After the Reform had been established, and the list of members was large enough to ensure its success, arrangements were made for erecting a Club-house. The desire of the members was to have a Club-house which should surpass any one then existing, not only as a comfortable and well-arranged building, but also as an architectural structure. Mr. Charles Barry was the architect whose design found favour with the members. His design was more ambitious, as well as more novel, than that of any competitor. When the Club-house was finished, no other one could be compared with it; the central hall being then, as it still is, unsurpassed. Though many palatial Club-houses have since been erected, it would not be easy, if, indeed, it be possible, to name one which equals the Reform in architectural effect. This building was opened in 1841 for the reception of members. Between 1836 and 1841, the members had been accommodated first in the house of Mr. Angerstein, Pall Mall, and next in Gwydyr House, Whitehall. Mr. Angerstein is now best known for having collected the pictures which formed the nucleus of the National Gallery. They were thirty-eight in number, and were purchased by the nation for £57,000. His house in Pall Mall, which was the first home of the members of the Reform Club, was pulled down to make way for the present Club-house.

The names of the founders and first Committee of the Club are not only interesting historically, but they deserve to be kept in remembrance. It is extremely doubtful whether more than one printed list of the original rules and the members of the first Committee is in existence. From the copy before me I extract the following:—First: the Trustees were the Duke of Norfolk, the Earl of Mulgrave, the Earl of Durham, the Right Hon. Edward Ellice, M.P., and General Sir R. Ferguson, M.P. Second: the Committee consisted of—

Nothing in the original Rules deserves particular notice, unless it be a proviso in the Twenty-first, to the effect that each member may entertain a stranger at dinner, "provided he is a Reformer." This restriction on hospitality was removed as soon as there was adequate accommodation for both members and guests. Members may now entertain two guests daily, whether they are reformers or reactionaries. The Club has gone a step farther, and admitted to the privileges of honorary membership for a month, foreigners and British Colonists who are temporarily residing in England, and in no case does it matter what the politics of those honorary members may be. The Club acts on the maxim that hospitality knows nothing of politics. In this respect it differs from its rival the Carlton. No foreigner or British Colonist, however distinguished, can hope to become an honorary member of the Carlton, nor can the members of that Club entertain strangers at dinner or any other repast within its walls.

In planning the palatial building now occupied by members of the Reform Club, the architect had included a large library among the principal rooms; even the drawing-room, the largest and finest of all the rooms, was furnished with book-shelves. Indeed, the founders of the Club contemplated making it as famous for its Library as it might become for its comfort and its cookery. The Athenæum, which had been founded twelve years previously, was designed to provide an extensive library for the use of the members; but none of the other Clubs, such as the Carlton, the Travellers', the University, the Oxford and Cambridge, the Union, the Garrick, which were founded about the same time, included the establishment of a good library as a leading part of their programme. It is true that a collection of books is to be found in nearly every London Club-house. But a collection of books may have as little title to the name of a library as a pile of stones has to that of a house. A pile of stones has its uses: it may form a cairn, and thus serve as a landmark or a monument. So a collection of books may supply suitable reading without serving the purpose of a library. In a good library the books are brought together according to a settled plan, just as stones are disposed after the design of an architect in order that the structure may have an artistic as well as useful character.

When the Reform Club-house was provided with ample accommodation for books, the question arose how best to supply them. A Sub-Committee which was appointed to give special attention to this matter, met for the first time on the 18th of November, 1841. At that meeting the following resolution was agreed to, and ordered to be communicated to the General Committee:—

"That as one of the objects contemplated at the establishment of the Club was the formation of an extensive and complete Library, especially on all political and Parliamentary subjects; and as the rooms appointed for its reception are now ready, the Committee deem it expedient to take immediate measures for attaining an object so important to the ultimate prosperity of the Club. That, therefore, a circular be addressed to all the members, earnestly inviting them to aid the Committee in this object, by presenting to the Club maps, books, pamphlets, and documents—more particularly political and Parliamentary; all such will be of importance and value—the first object being the formation of an extensive and complete Library of reference."

The Sub-Committee were strongly of opinion that "expense will be saved, and the convenience of reference will be increased, by commencing on a proper plan, capable of being continued and enlarged from year to year." It was the desire of the Sub-Committee to obtain the best advice in laying out the plan of the Library, and they resolved to apply for such advice to Mr. Vardon, the Librarian of the House of Commons, and to a member of the Club, Mr. Panizzi, of the British Museum.

A circular was issued, requesting the members to make donations of books, maps, or pamphlets, and the response was so general that, within two months after the Library Committee first met, arrangements had to be made for preparing a catalogue. Mr. Place, an energetic politician of those days, as well as a book collector, put before Joseph Hume, a member of the Committee, a scheme for indexing the Parliamentary papers. This scheme was adopted after it had received the approval of Mr. Panizzi in the following terms:—"I have examined Mr. Place's plan for cataloguing the Parliamentary papers to be collected for this Library, and with some very trifling modifications which I suggested to Mr. Yapp, I think it the best that can be adopted."

It was found that many members preferred giving money to a Library fund to giving donations of books, and an intimation to this effect being made to the Committee, it was resolved that a fund be established. Subscriptions ranging from £5 to £100 rapidly flowed in, and the Committee found it possible to order the books required to form the nucleus of a Library. The list of the books which ought to be procured as speedily as possible was prepared by Mr. Panizzi, Sir John Doratt, and Mr. Pryme. As the books accumulated, it became indispensable to determine how they were to be catalogued. This is a question about which it is easy to argue and dispute. Librarians have not yet agreed, and they may never be unanimous, as to the best way in which a catalogue should be compiled. Happily the Committee of the Reform Club had the very best obtainable advice at hand. In the formation and conduct of a library, the late Sir Anthony Panizzi made for himself an unrivalled reputation, and, in invoking his aid, the Committee displayed sound judgment. He was ready to help the Club, in which he had a personal interest; indeed, he was constant in his attendance at the early meetings of the Library Committee, and he promptly complied with all the requests made to him. It is now historically interesting to learn that Panizzi planned the Library of the Reform Club, and that he drew up the rules upon which the catalogue was compiled. These rules, which are placed on record in the Minutes of the Committee, are so practical and important as to deserve publication. They run as follows:—

"1st. All works to be catalogued under the family name of the author when it appears on the title-page, or occurs (printed) in any other part of the book.

"2nd. Works to be catalogued under the assumed name of the writer; the real name to be added in brackets when known.

"3rd. Anonymous works to be catalogued under the first substantive occurring in the title, and the name of the author, when known, to be added as above.

"4th. Collected works of various authors to be entered under the collector's name, or (according to circumstances) under the name of the first author mentioned in the title.

"5th. Cross references to be made from the names of the authors supplied as above, from the several ways of spelling their names, from their several names when they have more than one, and from the names of individual authors whose works form part of the collection.

"6th. An alphabetical index of subjects to be kept up at the same time, and, under each leading word of the title, a reference to be made to the name of the author, or word, under which the book is entered in the catalogue.

"7th. If a title-page be so obscure as not to give an idea of the subject of the work, a very brief description of its subject to be added to the entry of the title-page, from which to take the word or words for index of matters."

It is scarcely necessary to add that an alphabetical and a subject catalogue in manuscript, compiled on the plan laid down by Panizzi, have been carefully kept up from the time that he sketched the plan laid down to that at which these lines are written.

The first Report of the Library Committee, made for the information of the members at a General Meeting of the Club, was drawn up in April, 1843. Unfortunately the copy entered on the Minutes is imperfect; however, it contains information showing that the Library was making rapid progress, that the donations amounted to several hundred volumes, and that the number of books purchased was 1209, thus distributed: historical works, 362 volumes; general literature, 166; theology and philosophy, 52; politics and jurisprudence, 225; dictionaries, 40; periodicals, 364. A large part of the Report refers to Parliamentary papers, of which 206 volumes had been presented by Mr. Charles Romilly, and to the steps taken for arranging them. It may be worth while here to show how far the Library has now become rich in that department of printed matter. At present it contains 796 volumes of selections from Parliamentary papers between the years 1816 and 1854; also complete sets, numbering 260 volumes, between 1835 and 1839; and similar sets between 1855 and 1881, numbering 1890 volumes. These volumes are exclusive of the Statutes at large, Public General Acts, and the Parliamentary debates which are to be found in the Library. Since 1880, the set of Parliamentary papers is in the same form as that in the House of Commons Library, that is, the volumes are uniformly printed and indexed. No other Club library, so far as I am aware, possesses a set of this select edition of these papers, an edition which, though more costly, is far more useful for reference than the ordinary one.

Ten years after the Club was opened, it was resolved to convert the drawing-room into the principal Library room, and to make the room which was originally designed as the principal Library a smoking-room, as well as a library. When the older London Club-houses were built, a handsome room was provided as the drawing-room, and a small one, if any, was set apart as the smoking-room. In those days it was considered vulgar to smoke, while snuffing was generally regarded as a gentlemanly vice. The snuff-box was considered as indispensable to a club as a hall-porter. In the late Lord Lytton's comedy "Money," one of the scenes shows a crusty old gentleman determined to keep the club snuff-box within easy reach. The members of the younger generation of club-goers see nothing to laugh at in this scene, as it does not remind them of anything in their experience. A snuff-box, though still kept in many Clubs, is but seldom used. The original drawing-room, in most of the older Clubs, has been converted into a smoking-room; in the Reform it became the principal library, and a very fine library it makes. This change was effected in 1851.

In 1852 another important change took place. Till then the Library had been managed by a Sub-Committee of the General-Commiteee; now, however, an independent Committee of three was elected by a general ballot of the Club to manage the Library. A sum is voted by the General Meeting each year to be expended upon the Library, and the expenditure of that sum is entrusted to the Library Committee. An Annual Report, giving details of the way in which the money has been expended, is prepared for consideration and approval at the Annual Meeting. Six years before the appointment of this Library Committee, the services of a skilled librarian had been secured in the person of Mr. Henry Campkin, who actively discharged the duties of his office till the year 1879, when impaired health obliged him to resign. In consideration of Mr. Campkin's useful services, extending over a period of thirty-two years, he was allowed to retire upon his full salary, and to hold the office of honorary librarian.

At the General Meeting on the 4th of May, 1853, the first Annual Report of the first Library Committee elected by the Club was read. That Report gives a good picture of the progress made up till then. As it has a special value of its own, in addition to being the first of a series which is already long, I shall transcribe it from the Minutes of the Library Committee:—

"The Library Committee appointed by the General Meeting of the Club in May last, beg to report that, in order to obviate the frequent complaints to which the arrangement of the books in the Library gave rise, they directed its entire rearrangement, which was completed last autumn. The volumes are now collected together in a mode approximating as nearly to a general classification, according to the subjects to which they relate respectively, as the limited extent of the Library will allow; the references in the catalogue have been much simplified, and new catalogues of the books, in the order in which they stand on the shelves in each of the rooms, have been compiled.

"Considerable progress has been made in the arrangement and binding of the Parliamentary papers belonging to the Club. About fifty volumes have been bound during the recess, and the Committee believe that at the date of the next Report a much larger number will have been placed upon the shelves.

"The Committee found on their appointment in May last that not more than £90 had been expended during the then current year by the General Committee on additions to the Library. By the application of the £200 voted for the purchase of books at the last Annual Meeting, the Committee have made many important additions to the collection of English State papers, and that department is now in as forward a state as the condition of the market relative to such books has enabled them to make it. The following additions have also been made to the Library during the past year, viz.:—A collection of Greek classics comprising 103 volumes. A set of the "British Essayists." Several works in the important department of English topography, being the commencement of what they hope will ultimately become a complete collection for the different counties in England. Some valuable books in the departments of general history, elegant literature, books of general reference, &c. A classified list of all the above donations is hereto appended.

"A separate list of the donors to the Library is also added; and the Committee, in expressing their thanks to them on behalf of the Club, beg to impress on the members generally, how largely and how much more rapidly the efficiency of the Library may be increased by such means, as an auxiliary to the purchases which are made towards the same end, and for which an annual vote limited to £250 is not immediately sufficient. The Library Committee, therefore, in conclusion, beg to suggest that a vote of £250 at least for the present year should be granted to them."

When the Library grew to be worthy of the Club, a desire was expressed for a printed catalogue. In 1861 they embodied in their Report a recommendation to that effect. They were partly induced to do so by the example of the Athenæum, wherein the members had the advantage of a printed catalogue as early as 1845. However, the members of the Reform Club were not disposed in 1861 to expend the sum required to print the catalogue of their Library. In 1870 the matter was again brought before the Annual General Meeting of the Club; the Committee then reporting, "The want of a printed catalogue of the extensive and valuable collection of books in the Club Library continues to be a drawback, which, in the opinion of your Committee, ought to be removed as soon as a favourable opportunity arises." The members did not then consider the time opportune. Ten years passed away before the members of the Club were ready to accede to a request which had been twice urged in vain by the Library Committee. At the Annual General Meeting in 1880, it was resolved unanimously, "That it be an instruction to the Library Committee to have a properly classified catalogue of the Library prepared and published in such manner and at such price as they may deem expedient." At the Annual General Meeting in 1883, the first copy of the printed catalogue was laid upon the table.

It is unnecessary to make many remarks upon this catalogue; every one who uses it will be prepared with criticisms, and if the particular book sought for is not included in the catalogue, the criticism is certain to be unfavourable. While it would be absurd to maintain that the Library is a complete one, it is unquestionable that it contains a good selection of the best books in English, French, Italian, and German; that the works of reference are many in number; that the collection of pamphlets is very large and valuable; and that the collection of British topographical books is comprehensive. Indeed, it has long been the desire of the Committee to acquire all the best county histories, and their labours in this direction have been most successful. The excellence of the collection of pamphlets is chiefly owing to munificent donations. In 1842 the late Sir Wentworth Dilke presented 100 volumes of rare and curious pamphlets. In 1880 Mr. Louis Fagan presented 24 volumes of pamphlets on Italian politics, biography, literature, and art, most with autographs of their authors, collected by the late Sir Anthony Panizzi. From the outset the Library has been largely increased in size and utility by donations from members; the like spirit still prevails; and, in the twelve months between May, 1882, and May, 1883, as many as 119 volumes were presented to the Library.

The labour of compiling the catalogue devolved upon Mr. Charles W. Vincent, who succeeded Mr. Campkin as Librarian. Mr. Vincent has executed his arduous task with great care and skill. Two members of the Library Committee, who do not now belong to it, proved most serviceable during the years that the catalogue was in progress; they are Mr. James Rae and Mr. T. R. Robinson. The Library Committee earnestly hope that, whilst members of the Club who study the catalogue will feel proud of their Library, they will continue disposed, on ascertaining deficiencies, to aid in making them good.
